IVE said that since the establishment of the "Alistair Harvey Foundation Scholarship" in 2004, more than 200 Vocational Training Council graduates have benefited from it. More than half of the recipients continued their studies to obtain a master's degree after completing their bachelor's degree, and some even successfully completed doctoral degree programmes. This year, a total of 13 IVE students received this scholarship, including IVE Higher Diploma in Electrical Engineering graduate Kitty Chan and Higher Diploma in Building Services Engineering graduate Wilson Chong.

Kitty has studied applied learning courses in electrical and energy engineering in high school. During her time at IVE, she participated in a research project on smart grid applications jointly organized by CLP Power and the University of Strathclyde. She will enroll in the Bachelor of Electrical and Electronic Engineering (Honours) programme at the University of Sheffield in September this year. She believes that smart grid is a major development trend and hopes to become a smart grid engineer after studying relevant technologies and knowledge abroad.

Wilson's parents both work in the engineering industry and his childhood activities were all engineering-related. He has wanted to join the engineering industry since he was a child. This year, he will go to Glasgow Caledonian University in Scotland to study for a bachelor's degree in building services engineering. He believes that his learning experience at IVE has laid a solid foundation for him to obtain a registered engineer licence in the future. He hopes to return to Hong Kong to continue his studies and obtain a registered engineer licence, hoping to have the opportunity to participate in large-scale projects including those in the "Northern Metropolitan Region".
